4ft x 6ft in inches

Additional Information Only in the imperial system of measures are mixed units "allowed". That is, measurements like19 feet 4 inches 17 miles 13 yards 2 feet 5 pounds 7 ounces 3 tons 5 hundred weights 2 stones etc. In the SI or metric system mixed measures are "not allowed", and they are certainly not necessary. Something like 15 metres 78 centimetres 3 millimetresis expressed as 15.783 metres and it is so easy with a system which is based on powers of 10. Just a matter of adjusting the decimal point. It can be done on sight, no arithmetic is necessary. Contrast that with trying to do a similar thing in the imperial system. But do we need to be able to change mixed units into a single unit? Most definitely! Costing depends upon it. So does finding areas and volumes. Using formulas and changing into other systems also require it. So, science, engineering and commerce have to deal with it regularly. It is no wonder that science "went metric" over a 100 year ago. Perhaps it should be added that, although reference has been made here to the awkward nature of the imperial system, the measuring systems of nearly all other cultures and times have the same underlying fault in their mixed systems We should be clear where the "fault" lies. It is not in the fact that the imperial system uses measures called feet and inches etc., but in the relationships between those measures.12 inches = 1 foot 3 feet = 1 yard 22 yards = 1 chain,..etc. Now consider the measurement of 5 yards 2 feet 7 inches. To change that into a single measure (for whatever purpose) some arithmetic is needed to get any one of these 5.8611111 yards OR 17.583333 feet OR 211 inches IF instead we had 10 inches = 1 foot 10 feet = 1 yard then the above mixed measurement could easily be read off as any of 5.27 yards 52.7 feet 527 inches Page 2 We spend much time and money each year so you can access, for FREE, hundreds of tools and calculators.
