I'll admit it. I'm forgetful, and it get worse every year. Smart phones are a life saver here, without them I'd never get anything done because I'd spend my life trying to remember the things I need to remember. I need a calendar that synchronizes. I need a to-do list manager. But what I need most of all is something that let's me jot down bits of information on the go so I can sit later with a cigar and a nice espresso and fill out the calendar and to-do lists. That's where 3banana Notes comes in. Follow along after the break to learn some more about the notepad with the silly name.I'll admit it. I'm forgetful, and it get worse every year. That's where 3banana Notes comes in. Follow along after the break to learn some more about the notepad with the silly name.There's lots of notepads on the market, and I think I've tried them all. I even tried voice memo's for a while...which was a disaster of epic proportions and another story altogether :) When I came across 3 Banana notes I stopped looking. Whoever dreamed up the idea of a notepad that embeds images and text, sync's OTA and can grab text from barcodes needs a medal.Enough of my gushing, let's have a look at the app.The interface is simple. Pleasantly simple. Click a button, enter some text or scan a barcode, attach a picture or take one. Take a memo!The setup is easy enough, you can use your Google credentials or set up an account at snaptic.com to sign into snaptic's secure servers for syncing, decide if you want or need to geotag your photos and set your font size. Nothing complicated, and it shouldn't be. It's a notepad not a scientific calculator. Don't know about you guys, but I like simple.nice and simpleOnce it's set up, you just jot down your note on the fly, save it when done, and there you have it. 3 Banana supports labels and hashtags, and all text is searchable so you can find what you need to remember. A big plus is the syncing feature. If you use a Snaptic account, you can sync between 2 (or more) devices. When I discover that I'm about out of my Roasted Chicken Ramen, I can make a quick note, sync it, and my wife knows I need more fuel, all without ever leaving my mancave out in the garage!Houston, we have a problem!You can also share your notes via Email, Facebook, or Twitter if you would like. The obligatory "Pin to homescreen" function is there, as is a pretty decent widget.Homescreen widget and a pinned noteIf you need a little organization in your life, have a look at 3 Banana notes and I think you'll be glad you did. The ever-useful wikiHow has posted a how to detailing the finer points of taking good lecture notes, splitting the process into what you need to do before, during, and after the lecture to be prepared and capture the "perfect" notes.These suggestions could probably apply for taking meeting notes as well, though your boss may or may not be as prepared at the lectern as your professors were (at least mine never have been). Either way, this has some good tips for what you need to pay attention to in order to get the most important points out of a lecture. For advice on note-taking systems (which this how to does not cover), check out Gina's recent feature on taking great notes.How to Take Perfect Lecture Notes [wikiHow] No new notifications You'll get updated when important things are happening, and when you engage with our community. Whether you're a student who's got the 2019 budget iPad 7 with an Apple Pencil for taking notes in class, or a business owner who can afford the newest iPad Pro, interested in jotting down work-related or personal notes, you may find yourself torn between all the good options for notes apps available.We'll take a look at some of the most fully-featured notes apps for iPad, and see which is the one to best fit your needs. The apps on this list work great on all iPads with Apple Pencil support.Microsoft OneNoteNotabilityGoodNotes 5 Price: Free | DownloadNot only is Microsoft's OneNote completely free, but it covers all the basics most people need from a notes app, with the added bonus of cloud syncing between your devices through OneDrive.OneNote also supports collaborative work, by allowing for shared notepads. To-do lists such as daily errands, memos and anything else you may need to write can be well organized in pages, sections and notebooks.The available pen colors and pen settings can help add variety to your notes, while a "Convert to Shapes" mode automatically converts hand drawn shapes such as circles into perfectly regular ones. Support for images and image manipulation, an important feature to many, is also here, and works great. Price: $8.99| DownloadNotability enjoys great popularity and for good reason, as it's arguably the most feature-packed notes app for iPad.It supports a large variety of multimedia, not just static images, but GIFs, web pages, scanned textbooks and even audio, and allows for looking up handwritten text, written with precision thanks to the app's fine-tuned digital ink. It's also cloud-syncing your notes via iCloud, all that easily making it the best iPad app for students.Conveniently, Notablity was also made with multi-tasking in mind, allowing for working with two notes side-by-side, in addition to it having a dedicated Note Switcher for quickly moving between notes, on top of supporting Drag & Drop. Price: $7.99| DownloadGoodNotes 5 is a combination of digital notepad and PDF markup tool, as noted by the App Store editors. It delivers a precise and natural writing experience thanks to its signature vector ink engine.As the previous apps on this list, it too supports pen colors, thickness and style, as well as easily switching to a highlighter or eraser. Like Notability, GoodNotes 5 too can read your handwriting and allow for searching through it when needed, as well as converting it to text for easy sharing into other apps or even web pages.This app also supports for two pages to be open side-by-side, and for quick switching between documents using tabs. A tool for easily drawing perfect shapes such as circles and lines is available. As mentioned earlier, GoodNotes supports importing, searching and navigation through PDF files, but it also works with PowerPoint, Word, image files and more.Honorable mentions go to the popular and free Evernote app, which is better suited for iPad keyboard users, and the free Notes app that comes with iPad and iPhone. The latter is vastly less advanced than previously mentioned apps, but could easily be good enough for many.For those looking into more complex apps, I would recommend first trying the free OneNote before buying anything else.
