Submit a request Facebook's Messenger app is easy to use, but your messages can still get unruly if you're not diligent. Digging through an overflowing Messenger inbox can be as daunting as sifting through dozens of unread emails. Luckily, Facebook offers plenty of tools to help manage the clutter. Here are some tips to help you cut through the stream of messages to find the ones that are truly important. Start by deleting old message threads. There are some cases where you might want to erase a message immediately after the conversation is finished, especially if it's about a personal matter. Here's how to do it. On the iPhone: To delete a single message thread in Facebook's Messenger app for the iPhone, find the message you'd like to delete and swipe it from the right to the left of the screen. Then tap the "Delete" button if you'd like to erase it, the "Mute" button if you'd like to keep the thread but stop all notifications for it, or the "More" button to archive it, mark it as spam, or mark it as read. On the desktop: Simply open the conversation you'd like to erase and tap the settings icon to access those same options. On Android: To delete a message thread on Android, find the conversation you'd like to delete from the list, press and hold down on it, and select the "Delete" option. There are also a handful of other useful actions in this list, such as "Archive," "Mark as Spam," "Leave Group," "Mute Notifications," "Mark as Read," and "Pin Group." Rename groups messages and pin them. A thread containing multiple participants can get messy quickly. It can be difficult to remember the topic of the conversation or why it was started in the first place, which is why re-naming it something like "Roommates" or "Rachel's Surprise Birthday Plans" can be helpful. On the iPhone: Open the group message you'd like to rename, and tap the "i" button in the upper right corner. Then tap the "Edit" button in the top right corner, and select "Change Name." You can also swap out the group photo here. To pin the group, tap the "Groups" tab next to the "Recent" section and press the "Pin" button in the upper left corner. A list of all of your group conversations should appear here, which you can tap to pin. On the desktop: Start by opening the thread you'd like to rename. Then type a new title in the box that says "Name this conversation" at the top of the chat window. On Android: Renaming a group chat on the Android version of Facebook Messenger is as easy as opening the conversation and holding your finger down on the name of the group. This will allow you to edit it. To pin a conversation, just find the group chat you'd like to pin from the list and press and hold down on it, just like you would if you were deleting a message. Then tap the "Pin Group" option. Manage notifications for each conversation. Some messages are more important than others, which is why Facebook allows you to customize mute options for individual conversations. This is helpful if you only want to receive frequent notifications for a specific thread, but don't want to deal with pestering alerts from other chats. On the iPhone: Open the thread for which you'd like to edit the mute notification options, and press the "i" button in the upper right corner. Then select "Notifications," and a menu will pop up that lets you choose whether you'd like to mute notifications for 15 minutes, one hour, eight hours, 24 hours, or until you un-mute them manually. On the desktop: Launch the chat window for the conversation you'd like to mute, and click the settings icon. Then select "Mute Conversation," and a window will ask if you'd like to mute notifications for one hour, until 8 a.m., or until you turn it back on. On Android: To access this capability on Android, find the conversation you'd like to edit from the list of recent threads. Then press and hold on that conversation just like you would if you were trying to delete or pin it. This time, tap the "Mute Notifications" option to launch a menu of choices. From here, you can either choose to mute notifications for 15 minutes, one hour, eight hours, 24 hours, or until you choose to turn them on again. May 16,2020 • Filed to: Android Recovery • Proven solutions Using Facebook nowadays has become a necessity because not only you have the opportunity to keep in touch with your friends at all times, but though this site you can also get quick access to news, games and a ton of other activities that make it a complete experience. Facebook on Android is a much more interesting experience because thanks to it you can always keep in touch with your friends and family at all times, without having to worry about any issues. When you use Facebook Messenger for Android, you have the ability to send messages to your friends and family, but sometimes you do want to delete Facebook messages in order to avoid unwanted access from those persons you want to avoid. There are lots of situations in which you just need to make sure that you can delete the Facebook messages, either you want to remove everything you talked with a person, or you just want to avoid any data leaks. Either way, it's imperative to know how to remove Facebook Messenger messages. First of all, you need to select the message you want to delete. Tap on the desired message and press "Delete", it will automatically be removed. Depending on how long the message is, you might need to wait for a little while or attempt to remove the message multiple times. Still, this is the best method that you can use and it is also the one that offers some of the best results in this regard. Open the messages and locating the desired conversation history that you want out of the picture. The next step requires you to tap and then hold on this particular conversation until the menu will open, and then select the "Delete" option in the conversation history. You could also try to perform the action through the mobile browser, and in order to do that you need to sign in to the account, open the messages and the desired history you want deleted, then select delete in order to erase the whole conversation. If the conversation is long, you do have the option to select the messages you want deleted, an option that is very interesting to say the least! Unfortunately, the response here is a negative one. Once you send a message to a person via the Facebook chat, it's sent and you can't simply unsend it. Not only they will see the message, but depending on the notification setting that particular person has, he/she might also receive that message as a mail notification. The main idea here is that you need to do whatever it takes in order to avoid sending Facebook messages by accident, because something like this can happen, and the results might not be to your liking. Still, using the Facebook messenger is a very good idea since you can talk with your friends at any given time without restrictions. Is it OK for you to not be able to undelete the Facebook messages that you might have sent by mistake? Sure this is a problem, but in the end such a thing is supposed to be expected, so again, try to read and re-read the text message a couple of times before you send it, as these can have dramatic consequences in the end. As you can see, it's quite easy to delete the Facebook Messages on Android, all you have to do is to ensure that your app is working properly, otherwise reinstall it. Follow the steps we mentioned above and you will have no problem deleting the troublesome messages. dr.fone - Data Recovery (Android) could be your best tool to retrieve deleted text messages on Android phones.
