To continue, please click the box below to let us know you're not a robot. Please select your country and operator below to see Device Guides for your operator. Please note: Your operator does not offer Device Guides. Some phones, tablets, guides, settings and other features will be unvavailable or incorrect. Explore all new features to help you connect with others, stay focused, and do more with your iPhone and iPad. Back up your device to iCloud or your computer so you have a copy of your important information. Choose a backup method Make sure your device is plugged in and connected to the Internet with Wi-Fi. Then follow these steps: Go to Settings > General > Software Update. You may see two software update options available. You can choose to stay on iOS and iPadOS 14 and still get important security updates. To update to iOS and iPadOS 15, choose that option. Tap Install Now. Learn more about updating Learn what to do if you need help updating your devices. Learn how to update your iPhone, iPad, or iPod touch to the latest version of iOS or iPadOS. You can update your iPhone, iPad, or iPod touch to the latest version of iOS or iPadOS wirelessly. If you're using iOS or iPadOS 14.5 or later, you might see the option to choose between two software update versions. You can update to the latest version of iOS or iPadOS 15 as soon as it's released, or continue to use iOS or iPadOS 14 while still getting important security updates for a period of time. If you can't see the update on your device, use your computer to update your device manually. Learn how to update your device manually if you're using a Mac with macOS Catalina or later, or if you're using a Mac with macOS Mojave or earlier or a Windows PC. You might see that your device is up to date and that there's an upgrade available. For example, even if your device is up to date with the latest version of iOS 14, there might be an option to upgrade to iOS 15. You might want to upgrade iOS when you pair an accessory with iPhone. If a message asks to temporarily remove apps because the software needs more space for the update, tap Continue to allow apps to be removed. After installation is complete, those apps are automatically reinstalled. If you tap Cancel instead, you can delete content manually from your device to add more space. Your device can update automatically overnight while it's charging. Go to Settings > General > Software Update. Tap Automatic Updates, then turn on Download iOS Updates. Turn on Install iOS Updates. Your device will automatically update to the latest version of iOS or iPadOS. Some updates might need to be installed manually. Upgrading to the latest version of iOS or iPadOS software provides the latest features, security updates, and bug fixes. Not all features are available on all devices or in all countries and regions. Battery and system performance may be influenced by many factors including network conditions and individual use; actual results may vary. Helpful? Thanks for your feedback. Verizon is pleased to announce a software update for your Apple iPad Pro (11-inch). This software update has been tested to optimize device performance, resolve known issues and apply the latest security patches. You can update through iTunes®, Wi-Fi or over the Verizon wireless network*. Before starting your software update: Connect your device to Wi-Fi (if you aren't using iTunes), or make sure it has a strong Verizon wireless network connection. Ensure your battery is fully charged before starting the software update. iPadOS 16 is arriving in a couple of months and brings a whole host of new features: improved multi-tasking, new collaboration tools, and most important of all, the very first built-in weather app for iPad. Even though it isn’t out yet, you can get excited about iPadOS 16 because Apple has unveiled the key new features, which we’ve outlined below. If you’re brave enough, you can download and try out the beta version of the update right now. When will iPadOS 16 be released? Apple has confirmed that iPadOS 16 will launch in “fall” (or autumn, if you’re in the UK), but this is no surprise as it releases a new version every year. If you want a more specific date, iPadOS 15 was released in September 2021, so it’s a safe bet that iPadOS 16 will be rolled out this September alongside iOS 16, which we expect to be released at the same time as the iPhone 14. However, a recent report from Bloomberg suggests that, for the first time, the release of iPadOS 16 could be pushed to October. The news comes from Bloomberg’s Mark Gurman citing “people with knowledge of the matter,” who suggest the delay is down to several reasons. Per Gurman, the big reason behind the delay is that an October release would line up better with the rumoured release of the new iPad Pro and entry-level iPad, though there are other benefits to an October release. It gives Apple a little bit longer to test out issues with Stage Manager, the new iPad multitasking interface that’s particularly buggy in current beta builds, and it’ll also free up resources in the short term to work on iOS 16 ahead of release next month. The good news? You don’t have to wait until then to try out the next big OS update. How to get the iPadOS 16 beta As with iOS 16, iPadOS 16 is already available in beta form. The software was ready for developers on 6 June, the same day it was revealed at WWDC 2022. But while the public cannot get that version without paying to be an Apple Developer, there is now an official public beta which is freely available for anyone to try out. The first public beta of iPadOS 16 was released on 11 July 2022, with the second following suit on 28 July 2022. If you want to download it, follow our guide to installing the iOS 16 beta, as the steps for an iPad are essentially identical. But take heed of the warnings: beta software may not work properly, and it is a big risk to run it on an iPad that you rely on daily. Which iPads will support iPadOS 16? The following iPad models will be able to run iPadOS 16. The good news is that if your iPad currently runs iPadOS 15 then you can almost certainly upgrade. In fact, only two models have been dropped: the 4th gen iPad mini and the 2nd gen iPad Air. iPad Pro 12.9 (5th gen)iPad Pro 11 (3rd gen)iPad Pro 12.9 (4th gen)iPad Pro 11 (2nd gen)iPad Pro 12.9 (3rd gen)iPad Pro 11 (1st gen)iPad Pro 12.9 (2nd gen)iPad Pro 12.9 (1st gen)iPad Pro 10.5iPad Pro 9.7iPad (9th gen)iPad (8th gen)iPad (7th gen)iPad (6th gen)iPad (5th gen)iPad mini (6th gen)iPad mini (5th gen)iPad Air (4th gen)iPad Air (3rd gen)What are the new features in iPadOS 16? Some of the major changes are to multi-tasking and there are a few M1-specific software tricks, which apply to the latest iPads that use Apple’s M1 processor. Of course, iPadOS 16 also benefits from many of the improvements in iOS 16 (the iPhone version of the operating system – the two are still closely related). Here are a few of those, but read our separate guide to iOS 16 for more detail: Redesigned Home app for smart home controlsImproved dictation with easier swapping to keyboard or Apple PencilNew ‘My Sports’ section in Apple News with scores, schedules, and suggested articlesHandoff in FaceTime so you can move calls seamlessly between your iPhone, iPad, or MaciCloud shared photo libraries with up to six peopleEdit and undo send in MessagesSchedule and undo send in MailLive Text can capture text from videosNow let’s turn our attention to the new features that are more core to the iPad experience. Collaboration was a major theme of Apple’s iPadOS 16 announcement. For one, collaboration tools have been integrated directly into Messages, so that you and a Message group can work directly together across Files, Keynote, Numbers, Pages, Notes, Reminders, and Safari, as well as third-party apps. You can share a document with a whole Message group at once from within compatible apps, which will share it to every member. It’s designed to be quick to jump from that app direct into the chat group or even start a FaceTime call too. Changes to shared files are shared in the Message group so that you can keep up to date on changes even when you’re not in the file yourself. And you can even share the new Safari tab groups, opening a browser window together – even letting you see which tab other people in the group are looking at. All of these tools are taken to the next level in Freeform, a new app that will launch alongside the OS update later this year. Freeform lets you work across an enormous collaborative whiteboard. You can write or draw anywhere on it, and even pin images, videos, audio files, PDFs, and more. Freeform will launch on iPads, along with iPhones and Macs. Improved multi-tasking for M1 iPads The iPad is great for multitasking, with split-screen and floating window support, but Apple hasn’t done a great job of advertising the tech within iPadOS. It took steps to fix this issue with iPadOS 15, introducing a new icon when browsing iPad apps that lets you activate the split-screen functionality, but Apple isn’t done just yet. At WWDC the company introduced the new Stage Manager view, which will arrive on both Macs and iPads this year – though only those with the M1 chip inside. It’s more than a little reminiscent of Microsoft’s Windows software if we’re being honest, allowing you to open a single piece of software in full-screen while all of your other apps are tucked away. Curiously they sit on the side of your screen, in addition to the Dock along the bottom, so it will make things a little cramped. The multi-tasking bit is that up to four windows can be grouped together in overlapping windows of adjustable sizes, allowing you to focus on those while keeping your other software ready and waiting – but not distracting. Importantly for Pro users, Stage Manager also supports external displays. And not just mirroring – you can actually run separate apps on the display to those on the iPad screen, theoretically allowing you to run as many as eight windowed apps simultaneously. More Pro features Stage Manager isn’t the only new feature that’s exclusive to pro users. Reference Mode is specific to the 12.9in iPad Pro with a Liquid Retina XDR display, and allows it to match the colour requirements in workflows colour grading and compositing. Display Zoom is powered by the M1 chip, and lets you increase the pixel density of the display, essentially letting you view more in your app windows – ideal for split-screen multi-tasking. Finally, Virtual Memory Swap can re-allocate up to 16GB of storage to serve as make-shift RAM for demanding apps – again, only for the M1. This feature is widespread on Android devices, where the actual performance gains are questionable, but perhaps Apple has found a way to make it more effective. Desktop-class apps Designed to appeal to pros, though not exclusive to them, these updates are all about bringing iPad apps in-line with their Mac equivalents. Apple has instituted system wide changes so that iPads will offer desktop-style undo and redo, in-line find-and-replace, customisable toolbars, and the ability to change file extensions – among much more. This isn’t about specific small changes, and more about a sweeping move to give the iPad more of the capabilities and software of Macs, so it feels less like an iPhone with a big screen. Weather app Here’s the biggest surprised: after years without one, the iPad is finally getting the iPhone’s Weather app. We have no idea why Apple thought tablet users didn’t need one previously. With forecasts, weather maps, and alerts for severe weather or air quality disruptions, the app has all the important features you’d expect. It also boasts the same detailed animations to illustrate the forecast live. New gaming features Apple is improving gaming on iPads, too. For one, iPadOS 16 is gaining support for Metal 3, the new graphics API the company is simultaneously rolling out on Macs. It claims this will enable iPads to play much more demanding games than ever before. SharePlay is also being extended to gaming, with the Game Centre now allowing you to invite friends to launch a game with you, together with live messaging or Face Time calls. Features that are not coming in iPadOS 16 There were some features we expected to see iPadOS 16 but they’re not there. Will these turn up later on in the beta, or not roll out until iPadOS 17 next year? New lock screen Apple gave the Lock Screen on the iPhone a major refresh, with the ability to customise its look, as well as the ability to add a slew of widgets. But there was no mention of this for iPads. It’s wishful thinking that this is an oversight: it’s more likely that iPad owners will have an extra year – or more – to wait for the same lock screen changes. Those new lock screen widgets are also the iPhone’s first ever interactive widgets, allowing you to – for example – turn on the torch or use media controls without being taken to the app in question. Again, there’s no sign yet that these are included on the iPad version of the software. It’s hard to believe Apple would miss it out, but so far that does seem to be what’s happened. Redesigned app icons It was suggested that the redesigned app icons were coming to iOS 16 and iPadOS 16. The redesigned first-party app icons are allegedly in development by Alan Dye, VP of Human Interface Design at Apple, and his team. While there were never any concrete details about what to expect from the redesigned icons, it has been said that they’ll be “very similar” to the macOS Monterey icons. That could manifest as a modern take on the original skeuomorphic iOS app icons that had more depth and texture than the colourful icons of late, and the general iPadOS UI could also get a refresh to match. What are you most looking forward to in iPadOS 16? Let us know on Twitter.
