denial of service

On the Internet, a denial of service (DoS) attack is an incident in which a user or organization is deprived of the services of a resource they would normally expect to have. Typically, the loss of service is the inability of a particular network service, such as e-mail, to be available or the temporary loss of all network connectivity and services. In the worst case, for example, a Web site accessed by millions of people can occasionally be forced to temporarily cease operation. A denial of service attack can also destroy programming and files in a computer system. Although usually intentional and malicious, a denial of service attack can sometimes happen accidentally. A denial of service attack is a type of security breach to a computer system that does not usually result in the theft of information or other security loss. However, these attacks can cost the target person or company a great deal of time and money.

Common forms of denial of service attacks are:

Buffer Overflow Attacks

The most common kind of DoS attack is simply to send more traffic to a network address than the programmers who planned its data buffers anticipated someone might send. The attacker may be aware that the target system has a weakness that can be exploited or the attacker may simply try the attack in case it might work. A few of the better-known attacks based on the buffer characteristics of a program or system include:

- Sending e-mail messages that have attachments with 256-character file names to Netscape and Microsoft mail programs
- Sending oversized Internet Control Message Protocol (ICMP) packets (this is also known as the Packet Internet or Inter-Network Groper (ping) of death)
- Sending to a user of the Pine e-mail program a message with a "From" address larger than 256 characters

Date:

To whom it may concern,

I am writing this letter on behalf of my patient, PATIENT NAME, to appeal the denial of coverage for genetic testing offered through the Center for Precision Diagnostics, a CLIA certified laboratory located at the University of Washington in Seattle, Washington. This letter documents the medical necessity for this test to identify the genetic cause of NAME OF DISORDER condition and provides information about PATIENT NAME medical and family history, and treatment to date.

PATIENT NAME is an AGE year old SEX with a diagnosis of NAME OF DISORDER (ICD-9 XXXXXX) DESCRIBE DISORDER

PATIENT NAME has been evaluated by numerous specialists at INSTITUTION, INSTITUTION. PATIENT NAME has had extensive medical testing including, but not limited to, DESCRIBE PERTINENT TESTING TO DATE. None of these physicians or tests has provided NAME OF PATIENT with a diagnosis.

The fact that HE/SHE has PARTICULAR FEATURES OF THE DISORDER (E.G. BILATERAL, WIDESPREAD, MULTIPLE SYSTEMS) is strongly indicative of a genetic etiology, since they did not occur following medication or infection or other exogenous cause. This personal and family history, as well as PATIENT NAME's examination, are not consistent with any known DISEASE CATEGORY conditions, but are indicative of an underlying genetic cause.

The most efficient and cost effective way to confirm a genetic diagnosis in this patient is to perform LIST GENES genetic testing. Results from this genetic test will have a direct impact on this patient's treatment and management and will provide prognostic information that will assist in clinical management.

As mentioned above, knowledge of this patient's genetic information is important for me to more accurately assess her prognosis and will guide my recommendations for care.

To summarize, I am requesting to appeal XXXs denial for genetic testing through the Collagen Diagnostic Laboratory, Federal Tax ID #: 91-1220843/NPI #: 102 304 1159 with the following CPT code(s):[CPT CODES AVAILABLE AT www.uwcdl.org]. Thank you for your review and consideration. I hope you will support this letter of medical necessity for XXX. Please feel free to contact me at XXXXXX if you have additional questions.

Re: Request for Reconsideration of Qsymia® (phentermine and topiramate extended-release) capsules CIV use for [patient's name]

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing on behalf of my patient, [patient's name], who was denied coverage of Qsymia® (phentermine and topiramate extended-release) capsules CIV on [date of denial]. The denial reason was stated as [not medically necessary, not covered on the formulary, etc]. I am requesting a redetermination of the denial of coverage for Qsymia and have enclosed documentation that supports the use of this FDA-approved medication for this patient.

[Outline the patient's history, diagnosis, and treatment plan. Provide rationale for Qsymia treatment.]

In conclusion, please reconsider the denial Qsymia for my patient, [patient's name]. I would appreciate prompt review of this appeal and approval of this FDA-approved therapy. I can be reached at [phone number] for additional information and discussion. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Health insurance companies might deny payment for a medical service for any number of reasons. One common reason is medical necessity, which basically means that the insurer believes that the treatment is not medically appropriate for this patient. People can appeal medical necessity denials. This article includes some materials to help people write effective appeals following a medical necessity denial: To win a medically necessity appeal, it is very important to have support from a doctor or other healthcare provider. The issues in dispute in these case are medical in nature, so it's very helpful to have a letter from a medical expert who is knowledgeable about the treatment in question and knowledgeable about the patient's condition. This article includes some additional materials to make it easier to gather these letters of support: Conflict between providers and insurance companies goes on constantly in regards to procedures and medications for patients. Sometimes a physician will use his or her expertise to determine that a particular procedure or medication is the right approach for restoring the patient to health, but insurance company officials may refuse to pay stating that the procedure or medication was too expensive, not medically necessary and that a less expensive procedure or medication would have helped the patient just as well. These types of conflicts typically result in the filing of a medical necessity appeal letter. Content and Format A medical necessity appeal letter format can be tricky. First check the patient's policy to make sure the procedure is not specifically excluded. In the letter, state the provider's name, patient's name, date of service and procedure in question. Also list the patient's identification, group, policy and claim numbers. Describe treatment that has already been done on the patient, the results of the treatment and the reason the newer, more expensive treatment, was administered. Close the letter by noting how the treatment in question has helped the patient. Sample New medications are being developed every day for specific ailments and the newest medications are usually the most expensive. This medical necessity appeal letter sample deals with a patient who received the newest type of injection for arthritis in her knee. The injection was expensive and the insurance company declined to pay for it stating that one of the less expensive injections would have sufficed. A representative from the physician's office is appealing the insurance company's decision based on the fact that other injections have been given to the patient in the past with no success; therefore the physician elected to try the new medicine which is not an exclusion in the patient's insurance contract. Dear Ms. Crawford, I am writing to address the denial issued on September 10, 2013 for our patient Katherine Byrd (information listed above). XYZ insurance company denied the injections of hyalyronan into Ms. Byrd's knees stating that the use of the new arthritis medication was not medically necessary. XYZ contends that this newer, more expensive arthritis medication did not need to be used for Ms. Byrd and that one of the older, less expensive arthritis injections available today would have sufficed. ABC Arthritis Specialists respectfully appeals this decision. I have enclosed a detailed history of Ms. Byrd's battle with arthritis and the treatments, both in pill form and injections, which have been given to Ms. Byrd over the course of the last 3 years she has been seeking treatment from our physicians.As you can clearly see upon inspecting the records, other medications have either never worked for her or worked for a whilebut became ineffective over time. It was the best professional opinion of our physician, Dr. Gregory Pile, that the new hyalyronan injections should be tried on Ms. Byrd. For the record, she has already experienced a decrease in swelling and an increase in mobility in her knees. We request that XYZ Insurance Company pay for these injections, which are not excluded in Ms. Byrd's insurance contract. Please contact me at the number or email listed above if you require more information.
