How to turn a publisher file into a pdf

1 Visit an online conversion site. You can use an online conversion service to change the PUB (Publisher) file to PDF. Some of the more popular conversion sites include:[1] Zamzar - zamzar.com/convert/pub-to-pdf/ Online2PDF - online2pdf.com/pub-to-pdf PDFConvertOnline - pdfconvertonline.com/pub-to-pdf-online.html 2 Upload the PUB file that you want to convert. Click the "Choose File" or "Select File" button. Browse your computer for the PUB file that you want to convert. Uploading the file may take a few minutes. 3 Select the output format (if necessary). Some sites need you to define "PDF" as the output format. Others will be set to "PDF." 4 Click "Convert" to start the conversion process. Your file will be sent to the conversion service. It will then be converted on their servers. 5 Download the converted file. You'll be given the download link to your converted PDF file. Download and open the PDF in any PDF reader. You can use your web browser. Zamzar will email you the download link. 1 Open your PUB file in Publisher 2007 or later. Earlier versions of Publisher do not support saving as PDF. Use the method above if you're using Publisher 2003 or earlier. 2 Click the File tab or Office button and select "Save As." You may be asked to select the location before proceeding. 3 Click the "Save as type" menu and select "PDF (*.pdf)." This will allow you to save the file in PDF format. You may need to install the add-in from Microsoft for Publisher 2007.[2] 4 Click "Options" to optimize your document for PDF (optional). Publisher allows you to optimize your document for PDF format. The Publish Options window will allow you to adjust the picture resolution. Click "Print Options" to adjust the document for printing. 5 Save the file. Choose a location and save the file in PDF format. You'll now be able to open that PDF in any program that supports the format. Add New Question Question How can I shrink a large Publisher file size? Converting a Publisher file to a PDF can dramatically decrease the size of the file. You may notice some minor quality loss, but the converted file may be up to 90% smaller than the original. Question How do I convert .epub files to PDF or open them in Publisher? .epub files are actually ebook files, not Microsoft Publisher files. Since .epub files won't open in Publisher, you'll need to use an e-reader program or convert the file to a PDF. See How to open EPUB Files for instructions on opening and converting these files. Question How can I open a Publisher file on a computer that doesn't have Publisher? You'll need to use the "Without Publisher" method above to convert the Publisher file to PDF format. You can then open the PDF in any PDF reader, including your web browser. Question When saving my publisher file as a .pdf, the print is larger and the whole page isn't visible. What do I do to fix this? Ctrp+p and change the destination to "save as pdf" -- it'll convert almost every file and even sometimes web pages. Question Why is some of the text missing when a file is saved as a PDF file? You probably didn't run the Publisher Design Checker prior to saving as PDF. I failed to do this, paid good money to have a newsletter printed, and then realized that two lines of text hadn't printed. Ask a Question Thanks! Acrobat DC does not provide a PDFMaker for Publisher. You must open your document in Publisher, create PDF (either using the Microsoft “save as PDF” or printing to the Adobe PDF PostScript printer driver instance), and then open that PDF file in Acrobat to create a PDF form. - Dov 1 Like Jump to answer Microsoft Publisher is a very useful program that can allow users to create booklets, brochures, business cards, newsletters, etc. However, if you are creating something in the Publisher format, it is unlikely that most printers will accept it. Therefore, you will have to convert it into one of the most widely accepted formats out there, like PDF format, in order to easily print the files.
