It would look terrible if we forget Monica¢ÃÂÃs birthday and celebrate Josh¢ÃÂÃs just five days later, wouldn¢ÃÂÂt it?This happens because when the output of the MONTH function is sorted, it doesn¢ÃÂÂt consider the day component of the date. Therefore, you need an alternative method.A logical workaround would be to extract a date¢ÃÂÃs month component in a separate column and then sort that column in chronological order. Once the column is ready, we can use Excel¢ÃÂÃs built-in Sort Oldest to Newest option and should have the same output we got using the TEXT function.Sort Dates by Names of Months or WeekdaysLet¢ÃÂÃs say instead of the DOBs, you have just the name of the months in which your employees have their birthdays. Expand the menu and select Custom lists.In the left-pane that contains the custom lists, choose the format in which the months are listed (i.e., Jan, Feb, Mar¢ÃÂ¦Ã or January, February, March¢ÃÂ¦Ã). You¢ÃÂÂll see that the months are now sorted chronologically.The same method works when you want to sort data by weekdays. Let¢ÃÂÃs start by using Excel¢ÃÂÃs built-in functions and then move on to using a combination of a formula and the built-in functions.Sort Dates in Chronological OrderWhen you have a list of dates ready to be sorted in your Excel sheet, all you need to do is ¢ÃÂÂ use the Sort Oldest to Newest option.To do this, select the list of dates you want to sort. We can do this using the DATE function. You already know how we¢ÃÂÂre going to do this, don¢ÃÂÂt you?Well, we still need to talk about this briefly. In the Sort by menu, select the column containing the months. If you¢ÃÂÂre thinking about defaulting to the YEAR function, hold your horses. Therefore, the Sort Oldest to Newest option won¢ÃÂÂt work. The built-in function (Sort Smallest to Largest option) in Excel will sort dates by year, too.However, if for some reason you¢ÃÂÂre keen on using a formula, you can use the YEAR function like so:=YEAR(B2)Once your YEAR column is ready, the remaining process is the same. At the right end, you¢ÃÂÂll see a drop-down menu under Order. When you have a large data set to analyze, it¢ÃÂÃs often helpful to sort the dates in chronological order. Josh and Monica both have their birthday in December. If two rows have the same month, Excel will sort them in order of occurrence. We¢ÃÂÂll accomplish this with some logic and the TEXT function, like so:=TEXT(B2, "mm.dd")Once you have the text strings in the mm.dd format, use the built-in sort function. This time, you¢ÃÂÂll notice that Monica¢ÃÂÃs birthdate is correctly listed before Josh¢ÃÂÃs.Alternatively, we could also use a simple logic where we change the year for all dates to the same year. Select the MONTH column and go to the Editing group under the Home tab. tab.

24/6/2020 · Excel 2019, Excel 2016 do not support dynamic array formulas, so the SORT function is not available in these versions. If the array returned by a SORT formula is the final result (i.e. not passed to another function), Excel dynamically creates an appropriately sized range and populates it with the sorted values.
